

K-Love is an awesome radio station. They include news of what is going on in the local area, as well as Christian functions that are going on. For instance, if there is a Christian concert coming to the area they let people know about it.

I think to replace K-Love with a radio station that played a million commercials in one hour would really stink. I love the fact that they are a listener supported radio station, and play good wholesome music without a ton of commercials. Do you ever listen to a radio station and get frustrated with the amount of commercials that you have to endure to hear 10 minutes of music?

You don't have to worry about children listening to something on the stations that is not for their ears, like on secular stations. They don't talk about inappropriate things on the radio station contrary to some of the other radio stations. They also bring hope to people that have lost or run out of hope.

To get rid of a radio station like K-Love would be a great loss to the community they reach out to!
